

The Family Choices programme

Is for families affected by domestic abuse, is not about blame or shame, but is about learning how to behave differently, both individually and as a family.

The aim of the programme is to help you to achieve and sustain positive changes in your life, both for yourself and for your family.

Is based on tried and tested programmes of work with the perpetrators, Victims and children.

Will provide support and suggest additional sources of help when needed, both during the programme and afterwards.

What does it involve?

Victims and Perpetrators in separate groups will look at parallel themes including – different forms and patterns of domestic abuse, the impact on children and other family members, and the development of respectful, non-abusive relationships. Children and young people will be offered sessions at school provided by our specialist staff.

Questions about the programme

What about our children – can they come too?

For children aged 4 and under we will provide a crèche, in the same venue as the group work with the mums.

My partner doesn't want to attend – can the rest of the family still take part?

The programme will be most effective if the whole family is involved, however you can be offered support in alternative sessions if this is the case. Where the whole family starts the programme and then a family member decides not to complete the session, the rest of the family can continue.

How much does it cost to take part in the programme?

There is no charge for families to attend the programme.
